Boston, Oct. 16th 1843.

Mrs M.W. Chapman,

Madam,

Herewith I send you my "literary" contribution to the Liberty Bell, together with a trifling "pecuniary" one. They are both "small" enough in all conscience — but one of them will aid the work so far as it goes, if the other (the article) should not. They are "such as I have."

I am glad you did not hesitate to call upon me. Be pleased to do so hereafter whenever you think I can aid you in any good work. You may be sure that I will promptly decline or else cheerfully do what I may. Very respectfully

Truly Yours, A. A. Phelps
